"Mr. Proctor is a man of broad culture," he said, "a college man in the best sense of the word, a native of Kentucky and a veteran of the Confederate army with a distinguished record. Mr. Cannon has said the interviewas not authorized, but in the course of his remarks denying its authenticity, gave number of reasons why there should be that the Speaker of the next House win be opposed to the passage of any measura looking to swelling the volume of the cur-rency. there will soon be a general movement of strikers back before all of their positions are given to the many applications from outside. It is reported that several of them have indicated that they wish to do this and that they are waiting to get a number together so that they may lend their moral support to each other.

On the other hand the strikers declare, or their officers declare for them, that there is no danger of a stampede back, which will bring the strike to an end. President Griggs was seen last night and he was emphatic in his statement that the men were standing firm and that the strike will never be called on until the men get what they want. The situation, he said, is practically what it has been for the past few days.

"And this is not (emphatic) the beginning of the end. You may say that," he declared. "If twenty-five men went off like this it wouldn't affect us. We are here to stick."

"What do you do with a man who leaves like this?"

"Ontributions are still coming in to the strikers in amounts more or less large. The Conditions Yesterday.

In fact, the report that there was more disorder in Richmofid Tuesday night than there has been this week seems to be without any considerable foundation. A school teacher of Isle of Wight, who is employed in vacation time by the company, was attacked during the day, but the remainder of the disorder was confined to a few pebbles thrown now and then. The military received no reports of any serious disorder, and Jeny that there was a big disturb-were issued.

Was an Orderly Place.

Manchester was practically quiet again last night. There were some rocks and pricks thrown at intervals along the lines, and the quiet of the city was disturbed by the petulant explosion of torpedoes along Hull Street. No damage was done by the rocks and none to the cars or passengers by the torpedoes. So far as known, no one on the side-walks was hurt by the explosion of the torpedoes.

At Sixteenth and Hull Streets a shower of rocks greefed a Hull Street car, and more were thrown from the darkness between Semmes Street and the bridge.

None of those who attacked the cars showed themselves in the open. Darkness shielded them from the view of those on the car, and the soldiers who were stationed at various points. Nobody was injured.

were averted.
Within the very shadow of the station house and in the busiest section of the city torpedoes were placed on the tracks. No one could be found who put them there, and no one saw the person who committed the act.

The Forest Hill line was quiet. Nothing happened to destroy the serenity of the situation.

All the cars were better patronized than horetofore, although Manchester has by no means taken to the cars again. One man said last night that he wanted to go to the parks, he wanted to go fishing, and he wanted to go for Richmond, but he would never again patronize the cars until the old men were reinstated. It has been said that there will be trouble when the soldiers are entirely withdrawn, but the average citizen declines to believe that there will be any more disorder that at present exists, and from outward appearances this opinand from outward appearances this opin on seems to be borne out.

It has been understood all along that there had been adopted a scheme of reducing the size of the companies here by granting furloughs. The extent of this reduction was about one-fifth the number of each, and in this way over two ing on the Manchester Killing,

The most interesting feature of the strike situation in Manchester will be the coroner's inquiry into the shooting of Luther Taylor to-morrow morning, and the hearing in the case of Mr. D. L. Toney who was arrested by soldiers on the charge of refusing to move.

There has been much comment upon the authority and power of the soldiers in the shooting referred to. Many persons have expressed themselves to the effect that the soldiers exceeded their authority, while others say that nothing else could have been done under the circumstances.

The Two Sides.

The strike itself remains in statu quo barring the developments mentioned above. Each side declares that it has things its own way.

Officials of the company have not much to impart that is new. They are following along the old lines and are progressing to their eminent satisfaction. While the entire system is not in operation the city is well covered. The schedules are being gradually improved and gotten into their old state again and before long it is probable that all the lines will be working. New men on regular pay are being taken on each day and the permanent force is thus slowly, but surely swelling to the size desired. Several were taken on yesterday, including eight men from Baltimore. The most notable addition was that of the man Claytor, a striker. The action of Claytor is taken by many, including the company, to mean that the beginning of the end is at hand, and that there will soon be a general movement of strikers back before all of their past.

necessarily await the termination of the tour of active duty to which the law calls the troops.

"Were it otherwise, the law would impose a duty of the highest degree and demand its execution under severe penalties, yet at the same time itself prevent the discharge thereof.

"It would call into being the highest manifestation of the sovereign power of the Commonwealth to meet conditions before which ordinary legal and civil agencies are powerless, only to permit such ordinary agencies by ordinary proceeds to strike down the very power to which appeal was made for help.

"Troops legally employed on active duty, therefore, cannot be amenable while so engaged to such processes as would command their presence elsewhere than at the point to which they have been lawfully ordered, nor can they while so engaged be subject to warrants of arrest or confinement issued by the ordinary civil authorities for acts committed in the discharge of such duty. "Else by subpoenas to serve as witnesses or warrants for arrest, committed in the discharge of such duty. "Else by subpoenas to serve as witnesses or warrants of called upon to so represent the sovereignty of the State.

State.

"The power to so overthrow and bring to naught the military power of the State would be vested in the hands of the humblest magistrate, whether ignorant or ill disposed, and, indeed, the very rioters and insurrectionists by misuse of such processes could paralyze the arm of the State."

Mr. Toney, in his case will, also, endeavor to show that the solders did more than they were called upon to do, and he will introduce many witnesses to prove the statement that he did nothing to warrant an arrest.

Besides these two cases, there will be a number of more unimportant ones, and there will be several charges of ordinance violations against the company for running too fast, and for failure to ring the bells at all corners.

STRIKE-BREAKER ARRESTED

Had Been Discharged, and Made In-

Had Been Discharged, and Made Incendiary Speech to Car Men.
One of the interesting and significant features of the strike situation is the fact that the force of strike-breakers is being gradually reduced. As the company takes on permanent men it is letting go of some of the professionals, and in this way Farley has fewer men here now than he has ever had. About fifty of them were turned loose yesterday. Reports have been abroad to the effect that the chief himself would leave next week for awhile for St. Louis where there are street car troubles, but he said yesterday that he does not contemplate such a trip.
Beveral of the strike-breakers have given trouble, and have been put off for this reason. One of them, Andrew Conners had a row with Farley a day or two ago, and is now in jail on account two ago, and is now in Jall on account of certain subsequent alleged actions by him. The man was reported for riding on the cars while off duty and not wear-a few "jabs" (attacks on them), which would result in a victory for the strikers. He then proceeded, it is said, to indicate how best these "jabs" could be performed. He said he knew a couple of good places on the first Street line where "we" could do the work.

The union was not slow in making the speaker understand that it would not countenance or stand sponsor for any such stuff as this, and the man stopped. Yesterday morning he appeared again, and members were on the lockout for him with a view to making public any further such remarks that he might see fit to utter. He had a bundle under his arm, however, and it was feared that he was preparing to leave town. Soveral persons preparing to leave town. The officials of the company are eminently katisfied with the situation at large. They think things are coming their way, and are more than ever of the bellef that the strike is on its last legs.

More men are being added each day, and the return of one of the strikers himself yesterday is taken to augur that there will be other recruits from this source. Applications are being constantly received, and men are being examined and added to the regular force every day.

This regular force now numbers about

iff Simon Solomon, of Henrico county, who is under the fire of the Virginia Passenger and Power Company, which is asking for his removal from office, said he would certainly exercise his right to demand trial by jury. The law dealing with removals gives this right to all officers not appointed by the court. The case is set for next Tuesday, and will come up first before Judge Wickham on the application for a rule of the court summoning the sheriff to show cause why he should not be removed. The charge is malfeasance and misteasance and gross neglect of duty, based chiefly upon the failure of the sheriff to call out the military for Henrico before he did. The only thing Mr. Solomon says about the charge is that it is altogether unfounded, that he performed his duty and acted for the best interests of the courty and that he expects to show this to the court and receive full vindication from that body.

Mr. Solomon announced yesterday that he has prepared himself to resist the movement against him to the utmost, He has retained as his counsel Messrs. Hil Cartor and H. M. Smith, Jr. Passenger and Power Company, which is asking for his removal from office, said one of the most interesting happenings of the entire week, and one which has attracted general attention throughout the

Before the strike, Claytor was in good seems to be the cause for his desertion from the ranks. Payments from the National Union, he says, are being delayed and the families of those in great ilstress are the only ones being helped. This

There are without doubt suggestions from many quarters that more trouble is to come, and that the law-breakers are but awaiting the departure of the muskets to break loose again. Many people can be heard in a day to express the belief that violence is yet to come and to discuss seriously the ability of the police force to cover the entire town and handle it. It is even said that in some quarters a certain element of the population are preparing for trouble; are casting builets and making sling-shots, for instance, for use when
